Your own second-generation foal

Future generations will be even stronger.

However, there are limits to a horse's breeding ability. After mating a certain number of times, a horse's breeding ability begins to decline.

What are your horse's strengths?

Quick out of the gate! Strong around the turn! The competition between front-runners is often the key to victory. Choose whether to go for broke or save something for the final dash.

Front-runner

Stretch-runner

A poor starter, but with enough sprinting ability to come from behind and overtake the pack in the final stretch! Even better when combined with head-to-head racing ability and strength on the turn.

Recommended menus for gourmet horses

Vegetable salad

This is served when training goes well. Healthy and delicious!

Camembert cheese

Some horses don't like it, but I love its richness.

(Super) Chinese herbal dumplings

A rare treat that's only fed to strong horses. They say it gives a horse special powers.

There are many more interesting menus.

Racing Tip 1 Reading a horse's condition

Low levels ← Fatigue Fatigue → High levels
High levels ← Effect of whipping Effect of whipping → Low levels

The horse slows down and uses less energy.

Racing Tip 2 Don't whip too much!

Be careful not to whip too much. There's a limit to a horse's stamina!

If you whip too hard when the meter is at peak level

Your horse becomes tired
If you continue whipping...

Your horse will slow down!

Your horse will also lose confidence in you!

Racing Tip 3 Consider the type your horse belongs to

Choosing the right moment to use the whip is the key to victory!
